

Jawad Almodawi
ESL 220, Sec 002
Leah Keys Stahl
Expository ¶, Draft 3
July 1, 2011

Expository Paragraph

Marriage is one of the most important values in life. There are three factors that make marriage the most important values in life. Firstly, marriage protects the community from disease and pests. In this era, with increasing the number of problems resulting from the economic crisis which cause an increase in the unemployed people that's help to spread crime, assault, rape, and drugs. The reason of that is because all of these people who lost their job will act badly and they will try to do anything to provide money or place to life which will allow them to work in dirty job like selling drugs, dirty houses with will lead to sprit diseases like AIDS. Others might think that they don't have anything to lose because they already lost everything and they will start to do some crimes like killing, raping, and assaulting and prison will be much better for them than outside because they have something to eat and place to live. As a result of these, the community will be filled with crime, disease and pest. Secondly, marriage provides psychological stability and urges responsibility. Marriage helps both spouses to obtain the stability of marriage as a share joys and sorrows and help each other to solve problems and of course to provide this kind of needs help to get the psychological stability. Marriage adds to a man or a woman many new commitments and responsibilities. Married couples will focused and interested more in aspects of life and they will takes a longer time to think about any decision because they have a purpose in life that will help them to think before acting. Sense of responsibility will help to think properly and carefully before making decision about anything that regard to their lives and that what is missing in Singles because they feels responsible to themselves only and usually end up with a hasty decisions. Last but not least, marriage helps to build a civilized and sophisticated society. Marriage has a significant impact on the community and people started to move and search for the best jobs opportunities to secure a living for their family and the provision of security will be more and more because everyone is afraid and wants to protect his family. Married people will start to work hard to secure the lives of their families and that will increase the accuracy, quality, and efficiency of work. As a result of that innovation and society will grow and flourish.